Secondhand smoke and pregnancy:

How to protect your baby

We all know smoking and secondhand smoke are bad for us. But there are even more health risks for pregnant women and their babies! Secondhand smoke comes from smoke exhaled by a smoker and also from burning cigarettes, cigars or pipes. It contains over 4,000 chemicals, which make it dangerous for everyone.

Know the risks to your baby.

Exposure to secondhand smoke puts babies at risk for:

- Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS).
- Preterm birth (babies born at less than 37 weeks gestation).
- Low birth weight (babies born weighing 5.5 pounds or less).
- Respiratory problems including asthma.
- More frequent ear infections and other illnesses.

Take steps to stay smoke-free.

- Ask visitors and family members who smoke to do so outside your house.
- Never allow smoking in the car. And don't ride with anyone who is smoking while you are pregnant or with your baby.
- Tell everyone who cares for your baby not to smoke around him or her.

Remember – there is no safe amount of smoking or safe level of exposure to secondhand smoke.

Sun Safety:

It isn't just for summer anymore.

Sun safety never goes out of season. Studies show that excessive exposure to the sun and ultraviolet (UV) radiation can cause sunburn and skin cancer in everyone – no matter what your skin color is.

These simple steps can help keep your skin healthy:

- Stay in the shade, especially between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.
- Wear sunscreen every day with a sun protection factor (SPF) of at least 15.
- Wear sunglasses that block 100 percent of UVA and UVB rays.
- Use lip balm with an SPF of 15 or higher.
- Cover up by wearing hats, long-sleeve shirts and pants.
- Do not use tanning beds!
- Check your skin regularly for signs of skin cancer. If you find any changes, see your doctor.

The need for year-round sun safety has never been more clear. For more information, talk to your doctor or health care professional, visit www.staypretty.org or call 410-222-7979 for a Sun Smart Kit. Practice sun safety all year long for a lifetime of healthy skin.
